Overview

Fort Capital Partners is seeking a collaborative and high-performing Investment Banking Analyst to join our Vancouver team. The selected candidate will have the opportunity to work alongside experienced senior bankers in a unique, entrepreneurial environment, with significant and diversified deal flow. Since inception in 2014, Fort Capital has successfully raised over $5 billion in capital and advised on over $73 billion in M&A value. Our firm has approximately 60 team members across our Toronto, Vancouver, and Calgary offices.

What We Offer

At Fort Capital, we strive to provide an experience unlike other investment banks. We're a partner owned firm without the rigid structure you might find at larger institutions. For our partners, it means an exceptional level of flexibility and a culture of collaboration. For our younger bankers, it results in particularly broad exposure to transactions and clients, with a higher-than-typical balance of "real work" vs. pitching and routine client coverage. We work as practically and efficiently as possible.

Many of our partners come from larger bank-owned dealers, independent investment banks, or accounting firms. To date, three have reached partnership having started as associates with Fort Capital, and we have several at the Vice President (VP) or Associate Partner (AP) level with clear paths to partnership.

Our juniors get a level of senior access, mentorship and client exposure that larger platforms rarely offer, working directly with entrepreneurs and founder-owned businesses, TSX-listed companies and their boards, private equity and venture capital firms, senior and private lenders and more. Analysts and associates at Fort Capital take part in every aspect of a mandate, rather than a single workstream as is common at larger bank-owned dealers.

Along the way, we provide flexibility, including the ability to work from home on Fridays and a real effort to protect personal time on vacations.

We're team-oriented and collaborative with a flat reporting structure. As a developing banker at Fort Capital, you can feel confident that you're getting career-building, live deal experience and client exposure unlike anywhere else. If you want to learn quickly and be part of a passionate, engaging and entrepreneurial culture, Fort Capital is a great fit. Conversely, if you're looking for a ladder to climb, are focused on competing internally with your teammates for attention and promotion, this isn't the right place for you.

About Fort Capital

From the start, we've been determined to approach investment banking differently. We're an alliance of independent investment bankers, many of whom left the world of big-name banking looking for something better for our clients and for our own careers. Most of us grew weary of spending our days consumed by internal bureaucracy; bound by policies created with the bank's interests in mind, and not the clients'.

At Fort Capital, we're free to do the hands-on work we love, for clients we choose, and our clients' interests come first. Always. We start every collaboration with one fundamental question: what does our client want to achieve, and how can we help them get there? Then we build them the very best, most strategic team for the job—from our own ranks and from our network of collaborators, across Canada and around the world.

Because it's not about us. It's about our clients and the businesses they've built, often from the ground up.

We align our definition of success with theirs and doggedly strive to achieve it. And we do succeed – for our clients, on their terms – day after day; deal after deal. We're known for what we do in part because we're experienced experts in our field. But more importantly, we genuinely care about each client and every deal we take on.

Simply put, we're all in at a personal level. Because business IS personal, to our clients and to us.

It's a more rewarding, collaborative and client-centered approach to investment banking. If you ask us, it's the way investment banking should be.

Welcome to Fort Capital. Investment banking, elevated.
